AI 参考答案

I firmly believe that taking time to think carefully before making decisions is far superior to making quick judgments. While snap decisions might work for trivial matters like choosing what to eat, important life choices require thorough consideration. For instance, when selecting a university major, careful deliberation allows students to assess their interests, career prospects, and personal strengths. Rushing this decision could lead to years spent in an unsuitable field. Furthermore, in professional settings, well-considered decisions typically yield better outcomes because they account for potential risks and long-term consequences. Therefore, although quick decisions save time, the quality of thoughtful decisions makes them more valuable overall.

问题与建议

☐ 问题: ['Incoherent response', 'Lack of development', 'No clear stance']

☐ 建议: The response fails to address the prompt about decision-making styles. It lacks a clear opinion, contains grammatical errors ('the about decision important'), and provides no examples or logical structure. The mention of 'major university teacher' is irrelevant and undeveloped. Overall, it does not fulfill the task requirements for coherence, language use, or content development.
