#1 Some people prefer to get information from books. Others prefer using a computer to access information via the Internet. Which do you prefer? Explain why.

你的回答

Without a doubt, I favor obtaining information through a computer connected to the internet. The first major advantage is immediacy; digital information is available instantly. A perfect example is researching current events; news websites are updated by the minute, while books on the same subject are inevitably outdated by the time they are published. Furthermore, the diversity of content online is exceptional. Instead of being limited to text, I can access academic journals, interactive data visualizations, and expert podcasts, creating a richer and more dynamic learning experience.

Without a doubt, I prefer getting information using a computer connected to the internet. The primary reason is immediacy. Digital information is available instantly, which is crucial for topics like current events. News websites are updated by the minute, whereas books on the same subject are often outdated by publication. Another key advantage is the exceptional diversity of content. Online, I am not limited to text. I can access academic journals, interactive data visualizations, and expert podcasts, which together create a much richer and more engaging learning experience compared to static books.

I definitely prefer using a computer to access information online. My primary reason is the sheer speed and convenience. For instance, if I need to check a fact for a project, I can get an answer from a search engine in seconds, whereas finding the same detail in a book would require visiting a library and searching through an index. Secondly, the internet offers an unparalleled breadth of resources. I can read articles, watch instructional videos, and look at infographics on the same topic, which provides a much more comprehensive and engaging understanding than a single text could offer.
